ABSTRACT

Use of concepts to dynamically query a user and construct a sentence for responding to a user request. The use of hypertext concept notation permits the linking of related concepts through concept identifiers. The constructed sentence can be dynamically changed by a user selecting a representation of a concept within the sentence, either a complete sentence or one in the process being constructed. The data for the selected concept can be updated and the new data inserted into the sentence using the links provided by the concept identifiers.